Rendezvous with yourself

On the body level we often find ourselves tensed in different kinds of body tissue, which can reflect a conflict between the desire for love and contact and the fear of letting love in.

This workshop will invite secret parts of the Self, which contains the beautiful essence of the person, to be touched again. As a second step this vulnerable parts need to be protected, to get positive feedback and encouragement, in order to take a more central role within our personality.

Relational Bioenergetic Bodywork within a group setting of safety will help us to bridge the sense of separation we feel within ourselves and between ourselves and others.

To love a person means to see him as
God intended him to be
